

TANYA STEELE

Joint Occupational Health & Safety Committee Training

What makes our program awesome?

We teach your team how to run engaging and effective meetings, providing practical tools to transform them into collaborative, creative sessions. Instead of routine complaints, your health & safety committee will foster meaningful discussions.

Though an 8-hour training session may sound daunting, we ensure it's fun, high-energy, and packed with immediately applicable skills. Our interactive training caters to different learning styles, keeping participants engaged.

Designed for health & safety committee members, supervisors, HR managers, and safety coordinators, our program meets WorkSafeBC's mandatory legislation requirements (Reg 3.27) and the Workers Compensation Act Pt. 2 Div 5(41).

Why Choose Us?

Virtual Live on Zoom

This option is more convenient, engaging, and interactive, with easy scheduling and tech that keeps everyone involved.

Self-Paced Online

This cost-effective pre-recorded course includes quizzes after each module. Staff has 30 days to complete the material and exercises.

In-Person Sessions

We come to you! Our instructor(s) will travel to your workplace and set up in your boardroom or training room. Travel fees apply for locations outside BC's Lower Mainland.

Some of our esteemed clients

Work With Confidence! Meet Tanya

Tanya Steele is a professional trainer, safety advisor, and co-host of the Safety Debris podcast. Specializing in health and safety committee training, she helps businesses implement effective workplace safety. Known as the "First Lady of Safety," her trainings are renowned for being both engaging and effective.

She has been featured in the Journal of Commerce and Canadian Occupational Safety magazine, co-authored several books, and held leadership roles such as Regional VP of the CSSE, President of NAOSH Week, and is currently the President of the Canadian Association of Professional Speakers (BC chapter).

Contact Us

(604) 788-4463

www.JOHSC.ca

EMCEEING MADE EASY!

Safety conferences aren't always the most exciting events. Many attendees might be daydreaming about being anywhere else. But that's where I come in.

AS YOUR EMCEE

I'm not just a professional who understands safety inside and out—I'm a conference enthusiast. I love the energy of learning and networking with like-minded people in the industry. Throughout my career as a safety professional, I've used conferences to hone my skills and form lasting relationships. That passion is what drives me to be an emcee that elevates the experience of your event.

SETTING THE RIGHT TONE

Not your typical laid-back emcee. I bring energy and enthusiasm that will immediately engage your audience. While I'm not cartwheeling across the stage, my excitement will be undeniable, and your attendees will feel it too. Specializing in safety conferences, I connect with the audience through shared industry knowledge and inside jokes, making them feel at ease and excited about what's next.

Safety Makes Sense[™] Meet Tanya

Tanya Steele is a professional trainer, safety advisor, and co-host of the Safety Debris podcast. Specializing in health and safety committee training, she helps businesses implement effective workplace safety. Known as the "First Lady of Safety," her trainings are renowned for being both engaging and effective.

She has been featured in the Journal of Commerce and Canadian Occupational Safety magazine, co-authored several books, and held leadership roles such as Regional VP of the CSSE, President of NAOSH Week, and is currently the President of the Canadian Association of Professional Speakers (BC chapter).

Contact Us
training@tanyasteele.ca

TANYA STEELE
CHSC, (R)CSO, NCSO, CSS CSP